See how well your eyes are protected from sunlight.

Introducing our new MP-Eye test

Sunlight is essential for our health and wellbeing but if we're not careful it can cause macular degeneration. Fortunately, there's an easy way to check how well your eyes are protected.

Our new MP-Eye test takes under a minute to measure the level of macular pigments in your eyes. Macular pigments are your eye's natural protection against the damaging effects of bright light. They sit just in front of your light sensitive photoreceptors and essentially act as sunglasses for your retina.

Put simply, the more macular pigments you have, the better you're protected. But even if your score is low, there's plenty of lifestyle and diet changes you can make to up your count.

Taking the MP-Eye test is a positive first step to protecting your eyes and reducing the risk of macular degeneration.

We are truly fortunate to live in such a beautiful and vibrant corner of the country. The Tyne Valley is not only rich in natural beauty, it's also home to an incredible community spirit and a wealth of fantastic local businesses that help our area thrive. From the independent shops and family-run cafés to the skilled tradespeople, artists, and small enterprises that line our high streets and country roads - the Tyne Valley is bursting with talent, creativity, and heart. These local businesses don't just provide goods and services, they create jobs, support our economy, and bring people together. They are the backbone of our region, please support them however you can.

It seems that Summer has finally arrived. Here's to brighter days, shared moments, and the simple joys of community life.

Hidden Gems: Dilston Physic Garden

With summertime at its peak, I've been on the hunt for the best outdoor garden spaces to relax and explore. I was pleasantly surprised to find a Botanic Garden not far from Corbridge that I quickly fell in love with: Dilston Physic Garden. Just off from the Devil's Water, Dilston Physic Garden sits tucked away, a wealth of nature that you can both relax and learn from.

Dilston Physic Garden is a unique destination of discovery and relaxation, a UK Charity that is on a mission to transform health and well-being through medicinal plant education and research.

For just an £8 entry fee for adults, you can see and learn about a variety of plants, discovering over 700 extraordinary flowers, herbs, vegetables and trees with rich histories. Breathe in herbal and floral scents as you wander down trails that bring plants, science, myths and medicine to life. Relax on the chamomile lawn, play a round of croquet or a game of giant chess, all the while sampling teas, coffees and more whose ingredients have been sourced from the garden itself.

During my visits, I tried the spiced cacao, which when the weather turns and autumn arrives, will be a staple. You can purchase teas, books and more from their gift shop to take home with you too.

I had a great time just wandering and learning many interesting facts.

Did you know that some chemical ingredients found in many plants such as snowdrops, can enhance memory by increasing the presence of the neurotransmitter acetylcholine at the gaps between brain cells?

As my grandmother has dementia, the memory section of the gardens was of keen interest to me. And it's truly fascinating to learn about the science of it all, all the while immersing myself in such a beautiful part of nature.

Escape the hustle and bustle of life by relaxing alongside the Tranquillity Pool, rest on benches tucked away in quiet shaded areas of plants and just be one with nature. Racing thoughts were swept away as I watched bees swoop from flower to flower. Dilston Physic Gardens is a space where you can just breathe.

Another thing I loved is that most plants had not only the science of them detailed on their placards but the folklore of them too.

Did you know that forget-me-nots were named as such when a German knight tossed a posy to his lady as he drowned? So many stories could spring to life in that garden.

There's also a variety of sculptures and statues along the various trails. Find the stag hidden amongst the trees or the Buddha at the end of the bamboo tunnel. There's also the Oak Horned God by Jona Maurice to showcase the pagan god of nature and wilderness. One of my favourites was the Devil's Pyramid by Victoria Harrison which looks over the Devil's Water and is decorated with medicinal plants with 'Devil' in their name.

Another favourite aspect of mine was seeing the Cloutie Tree. An ancient Celtic and Tibetan custom is to tie a piece of cloth (cloutie) to the branches of a chosen magic tree (in this instance an oak) while making a wish or prayer. As the colour of the cloth fades, the elements take on the wish that will hopefully come true. It was lovely seeing so many pieces of cloth tied to the branches, so many hopes and prayers held in one place.

Whether you're curious, creative or just looking to lose yourself amongst nature, Dilston Physic Garden is a beautiful little haven to visit. Rejuvenate your mind, body and soul there. There are even workshops, courses and tours if you want to learn more and explore some of the transformative health benefits of medicinal plants. It is a sanctuary for both plants and people and a place I wholeheartedly recommend visiting.

Open Wednesday to Sunday from April-October 11am-4pm, and Friday to Sunday from November-March 12pm-3pm, find Dilston Physic Garden in Corbridge, Northumberland, NE45 5QZ.

Do you know a hidden gem or underdog business in and around the Tyne Valley? I'm exploring the area and hope to get to know the best places that may be overlooked. If you have a place to recommend, get in touch!

I love this charming tale about an anniversary; it really made me smile and it's got a local theme too! Hope you enjoy it as much as I did, Kim.

Vanessa lives, works, writes, and runs in Northumberland. She joined Northumbrian Writers in 2021 and enjoys writing short stories, flash fiction and poetry. Running with a local club helps her to focus and maintain her fitness and wellbeing.

Happy Anniversary, Angel.

Twenty-seven years. That's a long time, Jan thought to herself as she snuggled back under the covers. Seconds earlier she had laid a card on Tom's pillow so he would see it when he came back into the room. Twenty-seven years: the ups, the downs, good times, the not-so-good; that scary time when Nick's appendix burst, and Jan had to drive to the hospital because Tom had been for a pint or three.

As she reminisced, the monotone thud of steady footsteps ascended the stairs. The bitter aroma of freshly brewed coffee drifted up from the kitchen and Jan imagined her husband, newspaper inserted under one arm, trying not to wobble the tray as he brought their morning cuppas up to bed. The familiarity of this routine was comforting: coffee, the headlines, the crossword, and nothing in particular to get up for.

The door handle squeaked as it was pressed down with an unsteady elbow, and with the door inching open behind him, Tom shuffled in looking pleased with himself.

"Ah, you remembered," he smiled, spying the envelope as he planted the tray down on the bedside table, freeing the rolled-up paper onto the bed at the same time.

Jan raised an eyebrow, "Do I ever forget?"

"Well, there was that one time..." he teased.

"It was late. Late, not forgotten," she scolded, welcoming the hot cup of coffee he was handing her.

Before settling back into bed, Tom reached into his wardrobe and took out a neatly wrapped box. He always got her a present and his wrapping skills had improved over the years. Jan, more practical, always just offered up a card, apart from birthdays or Christmas.

"Happy anniversary, love." He kissed her gently on the cheek.

"You don't have to stick to the list you know," Jan rolled her eyes, but was secretly thrilled.

"I like the list and anyway, I just Google it these days. Don't have to rely on that scrappy bit of paper in the back of my wallet anymore." Tom's eyes twinkled as he laughed. "Can you remember the first one?"

"Ha! Yes, paper", Jan spluttered, trying not to spill coffee on the duvet. "You thought it would be funny to get me 'The Modern Wife's Handbook'! Cheeky devil, my workmates thought it was hilarious. I've still got it somewhere."

Jan thought it had been a one-off, Tom's idea of a joke, but year two, cotton, Tom bought her hankies embroidered with her initial.

Tom was on a roll: "Remember year three?" Jan glanced at the dusty glass bowl, weighing heavy on the dresser, a smooth chip on the rim where it had been knocked many years earlier.

"A glass bowl! You're lucky you didn't end up wearing it like a space helmet". She shot him a mischievous look: 'Angie's husband surprised her with a trip to Paris for their anniversary that year!'

Angie was Jan's best friend and consequently had been her bridesmaid. She had married Ross in a lavish affair in stark contrast to Jan and Tom's Registry Office do.

"Yeah, and where's Angie now? Living in La Petite Villa with Jean-Luc while Ross is stuck here still paying off Une Grande Mortgage." Tom's Franglais made Jan giggle but she had to admit he wasn't wrong.

That plain old bowl with the chunk missing had survived four house moves and three kids. It had been kept on the hall table for chucking loose change and keys in, an act of ritual, as metal clanked into the heavy-bottomed dish after a long shift at the hospital. When the children came along, it was where they got their pennies for the ice cream van. Now it sat on a doily on the dressing table full of shells the kids had collected from various beaches. A fine layer of sand had made its way to the bottom of the bowl and memories of warm sunny days and paddling in the sea came flooding back as Jan and Tom sat in peaceful solace indulging in their rich Italian blend.

"Penny for 'em?" nudged Tom. "C'mon, open your pressie."

Jan wondered what it could possibly be this year as she carefully unwrapped the paper and eased out the box. Holding it in her palm, she could see it was The Angel of The North in fake-rusted metal hanging from a key ring.

"I give up," she blurted, bewildered. "What on earth does this represent?"

Tom coughed for dramatic effect. "The Angel was completed in 1998," he proclaimed proudly, "the year we got married. And according to Google, sculpture is the traditional gift for twenty-seven years of wedded bliss!"

He grinned and clinked his mug with Jan's.

"A toast!" He gestured: "To you, my angel."

FurnitureClinic

care and repair

Is your furniture in need of a little care and attention?

From a dirty sofa to a scuffed bolster or a tear in your arm chair, Furniture Clinic is here to help you.

Our dedicated, friendly and professional team will visit you at a convenient time to give you a no obligation quote, and on many occasions will carry out the job in the home. If the job is more complicated, they will take the item to the workshop and return it to you when it is completed.

As well as repairs, we also provide a cheaper and faster alternative when it comes to updating your home and car's interior - we can re-upholster and re-trim leather and fabric furniture, or even carry out a complete colour change.

Re-trimming is available for both classic and modern cars. As leather specialists, we can custom match panels and seats to blend in with the rest of the leather, rather than re-trimming the full interior. This option saves you a lot of time and money, and will help retain the authenticity of a classic car.

In addition, French polishers are able to clean, repair and carry out full restorations to any wooden items.

As industry experts, Furniture Clinic serve many large national business needs, such as hotel and restaurant chains. Their diverse and respected client base means that you can feel confident knowing Furniture Clinic is the right company for you.

To find out more about we can do for your items, give us a call on 01207 282 644.

Harnessing the Sun

What You Need to Know Before Installing Solar Power at Home

As the global push for renewable energy gains momentum, solar power has become an increasingly popular option for homeowners looking to cut energy costs and reduce their carbon footprint. But with heavy marketing, government incentives, and a surge of new installation companies, it's important to understand how solar works — and what to look out for before making the investment.

What is Solar Energy and How Does it Work?

Solar energy is generated by capturing sunlight and converting it into usable electricity through photovoltaic (PV) panels. These panels are typically mounted on rooftops and made up of many solar cells, which absorb sunlight and create direct current (DC) electricity. This DC power is then converted into alternating current (AC) by an inverter, making it suitable for use in your home.

When your solar system generates more electricity than you use, the surplus can be fed back into the grid, potentially earning you credits from your utility provider. Conversely, during times when your system isn't producing enough power — such as at night or on overcast days — you'll draw energy from the grid unless you have a battery system in place.

Why Batteries Matter

While solar panels are effective during daylight hours, they alone can't store power. This is where batteries come in. A solar battery stores excess energy generated during the day so it can be used later, increasing your energy independence and reducing reliance on the grid.

In recent years, battery technology has improved significantly, and costs have dropped, making it a more feasible option for many homeowners. Alongside an emergency power switch (EPS) switch, a solar battery system also adds resilience during power outages, ensuring critical appliances stay on when the grid goes down.

Fitting Solar Panels to Different Roofs

Contrary to popular belief, you don't need a perfectly south-facing roof to benefit from solar. While orientation and angle do influence efficiency, modern solar systems are versatile and can be fitted on a variety of roof types, including flat, pitched, tiled, and even metal roofs.

What matters most is that your roof has sufficient sunlight exposure and is in good condition. We typically assess shading from nearby trees, buildings, or chimneys, and design the system accordingly to maximize output.

Why Choosing the Right Installer Matters

Not all solar companies are created equal — and choosing the right installer is perhaps the most important decision you'll make during this process. Look for a company that is MCS-certified (Microgeneration Certification Scheme), which ensures the installer meets recognised standards for quality and performance.

More importantly, you want a provider who is in it for the long haul. A well-established, trusted company will not only install your system properly but also provide ongoing support, including annual maintenance checks. These routine inspections ensure that your system remains efficient and safe, and that cables, connections, and inverters are all functioning correctly.

The Risks of Pop-Up Solar Companies

Government incentives and tax rebates have sparked a boom in solar installations — and with that, a flood of pop-up companies looking to cash in. Many of these newcomers lack the experience, accreditation, and infrastructure to offer long-term service and support.

These companies often rely on aggressive marketing, targeting homeowners with flashy promises of “free solar panels” or exaggerated savings. While the offers may look attractive at first glance, they often come with hidden costs, low-quality components, or poorly executed installations that can lead to expensive repairs down the line.

Be wary of high-pressure sales tactics or companies that are reluctant to provide customer references, proper documentation, or long-term warranties. It's always worth doing your research, reading reviews, or better still go with companies that operate in your area so you can talk to previous customers.

What to Ask Before You Commit

When vetting potential installers, consider asking the following:

- Are you MCS-certified?
- What warranties do you offer on both the panels and the installation?
- Do you offer maintenance or monitoring services?
- What brand of panels and batteries do you use?
- Can you provide references or examples of past installations?

Getting clear answers to these questions can help you separate reputable providers from opportunistic ones.

Final Thoughts

Solar energy is a smart, long-term investment for both your wallet and the planet — but only if it's done right. The key is not just in the panels or the technology, but in who you trust to install and maintain the system. With the right installer, solar can offer decades of clean, reliable power.

As government support for renewables continues, more households are expected to make the switch. If you're considering solar, take the time to educate yourself, avoid heavy-handed sales tactics, and choose a company that will stand by their work for years to come. At Tyne Valley Wind and Solar we regularly do small presentations in local church halls so keep an eye out for these on Facebook or on our website.

Wonderful Walking:

The answer to being more active is right at your feet

As I travel around the Tyne Valley it's really encouraging to see so many people of all ages being active. Whether it's Parkrun in Prudhoe, cricket in Corbridge or rowing up the Tyne from Newburn, there's always something happening. The most common sight though is of people walking all over our beautiful region; maybe strolling along the riverside from Wylam, conquering the Hadrian's Wall path or walking through some of our lovely parks and woodlands.

Walking is possibly the best way of becoming and staying active, and often delivers significant physical and mental benefits without you even noticing. It's simple and free, and can help cut the risk of heart disease and stroke, reduce weight, and along with improving sleep and mood, boost the immune system and sharpen your memory. So with all these positive benefits, let's have a closer look at something we all pretty much take for granted, getting up and going for a walk.

Getting Started

As always, if you are thinking of increasing the amount you are active you can always have a quick chat with your healthcare provider first, who will often have some great advice about setting a few targets or goals. And if you feel a bit unsteady on your feet then make sure you set off with a friend you can lean on, or remember to bring any mobility aids like walking sticks or poles with you. Make sure you have some comfortable shoes on, and if you are planning on longer walks then some water, sunscreen, a hat and a charged mobile phone are good items to bring.

If you aren't usually very active then start gently. Stay on the flat in areas you know, and gradually increase your distance; a park or trail with handy benches is great for this!

Speed or distance?

We've talked before about intensity of exercise, and it's particularly relevant here. Any walking will be of benefit to you, but try and inject some pace into your walk whenever you can. A brisk walk of about 3 miles an hour will really increase the health benefits to you, so try and get above a stroll whenever you can. You can tell if you are hitting the right pace if you can still talk but not sing! The NHS has an excellent free app called Active 10 which tracks your walking, tells you if you are walking fast enough, shows your achievements and helps set goals - you can find it on the App Store. So a good pace is your target, but some longer walks can really help strengthen joints, muscles and your heart, as well as letting your mind unwind. Ideally try and mix short brisk walks with longer ones where you can really stretch your legs.

Counting Steps

You'll have no doubt heard that we should all be aiming for 10,000 steps a day, which is roughly 5 miles/8 kilometers depending on your stride length. This is a great target, but it's not achievable for everyone, but there is some recent good news about how many steps a day bring benefits. Researchers have found that walking any amount is important, while walking even around 2000 steps a day lowers the risk of death from cardiovascular disease, and 4000 daily steps reduces the risk of death from any cause. The research clearly showed that the more you walk the better your well being, which is great encouragement for us all.

The hidden benefits

If you walk regularly you'll soon notice that your fitness is improving, and most likely your weight is going down and your body is getting stronger. What you might not notice straight away are the benefits to your mind. Just 10 minutes of walking outside is enough to increase alertness and mood, especially if it's sunny. Walking in nature is proven to reduce anxiety and depression, and is an accessible form of exercise for people with a range of mental health symptoms.

Physical activity like walking releases endorphins (the chemicals that promote happiness), and it reduces levels of stress hormones like cortisol, boosting our ability to relax and unwind. Being outdoors on a walk also exposes us to natural light and tops up our levels of vitamin D. You'll also be able to appreciate nature up close, even in the urban areas along the Tyne Valley you'll regularly see deer, owls, rabbits and buzzards, and I'm always delighted to see the salmon, kingfishers and the occasional seal in the river when I'm out for an early morning walk.

Make it social

Walking with friends or family is a great way of catching up and swapping news, and it's also worth joining a walking group to make new friends and stay motivated. There are lots of organised walks in the region, so it's worth having a look at the Ramblers website - ramblers.org.uk or join one of the free weekly Wellbeing Walks in Northumberland organised by Places Leisure - placesleisure.org

Now that summer is here, what are you waiting for? Head out of your front door and explore our beautiful region by foot - I guarantee you'll feel fitter and happier for it!

Northeast Campervan Motorhome Hire

gocampervan Freedom awaits you ...

- We are looking for the right person to take over our family hire business of over 10 years
- This is a fantastic opportunity to grow a branded business with a well established website on Google
- Clients from near and abroad
- Being one of the original campervan hire companies in the northeast we have continued to hold page one search position on Google, something which is unattainable in today's market without paying heavy advertising costs. For this reason we are offering the brand and website for sale only - no vehicles are included in the sale
- Due to the high volume of enquiries we receive, we have not had to link to outside commissioned booking sites or paid advertising ever. The website generates far more interest than we can handle
- This sale would suit an already established business who wants to expand and be top of google search, or someone who has - or wishes to, acquire a campervan to hire as an easy form of income
- No vehicles or premises are included - so this opportunity would suit someone with their own campervan or motorhome wanting to rent it out or to expand with more vehicles
- Fantastic earning potential working from home
- You will receive full training and support

ONLY - £7500

Butterfly Watching

'Butterfly watching'; there is, believe it or not, several books with this title, a subject slightly ethereal and to most folks eliciting the response "what?". Colourful in passing, intriguing even and increasingly uncommon (this year is a good one, last year abysmal) most people appreciate a butterfly fly by and welcome them in their gardens. But actually, standing and closely observing their detail, and behaviour, not really. Well, I am a butterfly watcher, a birder and a tree hugger. I also observe and take in the wonder and good of nature in detail as part of my personal health plan, looking into the wild is good for us.

I've just had a blissful few moments, a brief stop by an old hedgerow and overgrown edge of a copse, up the road from Hetton on the Wall, where I was surrounded by butterflies. It was quite magical.

For about 10 minutes I left the busyness of life behind. I felt myself de-stressing and letting go of my worries (like how do we get another few million towards the Rothbury purchase, the details of a presentation I was about to deliver, an unexpected illness in the family) the ordinary mix of anxieties we all cope with every day.

Nothing mattered while I zoomed in first on a comma. This orange fritillary patterned specimen looked like a crinkled old leaf until it opened its wings, to reveal its orange splendour. Very close and with my reading glasses on, I saw its eyes, antennae and its white legs. There were also a clutch of other species sampling some wild roses and hawthorn flowers, five red admirals and two tortoiseshells, all instant reminders of childhood butterfly chasing! There were smoky black ringlets and a couple of meadow browns with their tan underwings and a few small whites sparring and spiralling in the morning sun.

I looked up to see three new fledged blue tits watching, all yellowed in their new fluffed up feathers, and heard the sounds of skylark, swift and pipit not far away, it felt like the essences of summer were all around. It changed my mood and perspective for the whole week after.

We so need these moments to help us navigate the tough stuff, the intensity and pace of our modern lives. Nature is our respite, for sure our natural health service on tap.

Aside from our own lives what is happening globally and politically is anxiety making. Even in our beautiful countryside the thoughts of distant war zones penetrate and create fear and frustration.

From my naturalist perspective I do worry on top of all the human suffering about the terrible impact on animals and wildlife and the environment of wars. Human life in these places is reduced to survival mode where no one cares or notices anything, never mind a butterfly! But perhaps at times they do. If there are any left. For many writers in war time do write poetry about the birds and wild places they see, as a contrast and solace to the terror and pain they experience around them

At home I'm also frustrated by the governments plans to undermine long held wildlife protections in their now infamous 'Infrastructure and Planning Bill', being pushed through parliament as I write. It is a great danger to wildlife protection at a time we need to have more biodiversity and bring back abundance Here in the UK we have one of the worst levels in the world, can you believe it, in this country where we love our landscapes and nature?

Local MPS and Councillors do here thankfully, on the whole, see the importance of ensuring nature thrives, alongside plans for new housing and other development, we really need to maintain protection of what we have. Nature is part of the solution to many problems, not a blocker. We all need to live with wildlife and green spaces around us, so we can have those magic healing moments at hand and let our children grow up feeling nature around them.

These few butterflies I saw symbolise the intrinsic beauty of the Tyne Valley and Northumberland. It can seem at times like everything is ok here and our wildlife is not at risk. But so much has been lost that seeing a few butterflies, let alone a hedgehog or a group of bats, or a cloud of insects, as we are experiencing this year, seems like a special event, when it should be normal.

Let's hope we humans sort ourselves out globally and locally so nature can continue to support us in this increasingly challenging world.

The restorative power of Dru yoga

Dru Yoga is a therapeutic, heart-centered style of yoga that's quietly transforming the way people approach wellbeing. Rooted in a blend of Hatha and Kundalini Yoga, with graceful elements of Tai Chi and Qi Gong, Dru Yoga is designed to work on every layer of your being to improve physical health, mental clarity and emotional balance. It's a moving meditation which appeals to everyone regardless of age, flexibility, or experience. At the heart of Dru are the powerful Energy Block Release sequences, which help shift stuck energy, relieve tension and leave you feeling deeply relaxed. Classes often incorporate classic yoga postures, flowing breathwork, ancient mudras (hand gestures), affirmations and guided meditation. Sessions often feature Tibetan singing bowls, gongs, or chimes for a truly soulful, sensory experience.

The word Dru comes from "Dhruva," the Sanskrit word for "pole star" and symbolises your inner still point even whilst you're in motion.

Dru was created by Mansukh Patel, Chris Barrington, Rita Goswami, Annie Jones and John Jones in 1978 whilst studying at Bangor University Wales. Dru's origins were inspired by sacred teachings of Francis of Assisi and Mathatma Ghandi.

Today Dru's training centre and The World Peace Flame created in July 2003 are located near Bethesda, in Snowdonia National Park, North Wales.

Check out www.druyoga.com to discover retreats, events, training and more.

Now taught in over 31 countries, Dru Yoga has a growing presence right here in the Tyne Valley. Whether you're healing an injury, easing stress, or simply curious, this gentle-yet-powerful practice offers a beautiful path to inner balance.

Why choose Dru Yoga?

Dru Yoga is often described as "yoga with a heart." It offers a gentle yet powerful approach to movement, breath, and mindfulness that makes it accessible to everyone. Unlike other yoga forms that emphasise complex poses, Dru invites you to move with kindness, awareness, and flow. The benefits are immense even if you suffer from an injury, as a skilled teacher can work around your injuries to support your recovery.

Dru Yoga in support of wellness

Dru Yoga supports mobility, eases chronic pain and enhances posture through gentle flowing sequences. It's also known to reduce anxiety, lift low mood and boost clarity by calming the nervous system and encouraging a peaceful mindset. One of Dru's strengths is its use of breath (or prana) to unlock energy and bring balance to the body.

Who is Dru yoga for?

Dru is for everyone. It is suitable for beginners and seasoned yogis, children and seniors. It's for anyone looking to balance body, mind and spirit. Dru yoga meets you exactly where you are.

How often should you do Dru yoga?

You don't need to practice every day to feel the benefits. Even one or two sessions a week can make a noticeable difference. Attending a weekly class combined with shorter home practices to maintain flexibility and flow is key.

How do you prepare for a Dru yoga session?

Dru Yoga doesn't require fancy equipment. A good-quality yoga mat, comfy clothes, a cushion or blanket for seated meditation and you're good to go.

Two Dru yoga postures you can try at home

Here are two gentle, therapeutic postures you can try with just a mat or towel and a few quiet minutes to get centered.

Cat Pose (Marjaryasana)

Benefits:

The Cat Pose creates a gentle, wave-like motion along the spine, helping to release physical and emotional tension. It stretches and tones the back, abdominal muscles, supports digestion and nourishes internal organs. Mentally, it fosters a harmonious flow of positive energy. This pose also enhances pranic energy, activating full chakra awareness. The practice can be deepened by engaging bandhas (energy locks).

How to practice:

Begin in a tabletop position, with hands shoulder-width apart and knees hip-width apart. On an inhale, gently arch the spine, gaze slightly upward and extend through the shoulders down to the wrists. As you exhale, draw the navel toward the spine whilst gradually drawing the chin to chest, creating a deep, rounded curve in the back. Breathe mindfully.

The Dog Pose (Adho Mukha Svanasana)

Benefits:

This pose strengthens the arms, shoulders and legs while stretching the hamstrings, calves, and spine. It increases blood flow to the brain, which helps nourish and calm the mind.

How to practice:

Start in relaxed cat pose. On an exhale, engage your pelvic floor, tuck your toes under and spread your hands. Raise the hips towards the ceiling, extend through the shoulders and gently draw the navel towards the spine. Step your feet out almost as wide as the mat to allow space. Gently soften your heels towards the floor.

Happy Practicing Namaste

Photography Competition Results

Firstly, thanks to all of you that entered our second TVE photography competition. Once again we had a strong entry with some really great images and choosing my top three was a difficult task, so thanks to you all for the standard of entries. My main message to all entrants though is Please read the brief! When entering a competition for something like a cover shot, you cannot win if you don't match the brief, so it was quite important to fully read the brief and my points that accompanied it. As last time, we had some fantastic shots that unfortunately, were presented in portrait format instead of in landscape format as requested, which means key elements would be cropped off to make them fit the cover. This too applies for allowing copy space for the magazine title. Again, a few images could not be selected as key elements would be covered by the TVE logo. That said, a lot of very good shots were presented. I've selected my top three images as you will see below. The first choice winner jumped out at me immediately, and the overall winner, which I'm happy to announce, is Adrian Bollans with his superb shot, Engine Envy, taken at the recent Corbridge steam rally! Congratulations Adrian, Your image is on the cover and will be seen by thousands of people around the North East! Here are my top three...

Winner, Adrian Bollans - Engine envy.

This jumped out at me immediately. It met the brief fully and was super sharp and perfectly exposed and executed. The moody sky and colours of the steam engines worked perfectly together to create a very interesting image, something a bit different, and perfect for a cover shot. Congratulations again Adrian, I really like this shot!

Runners up - both very close contenders!

Shell Harrison - Red Squirrel

A beautiful shot of a, sadly rare, Red Squirrel. You have captured the squirrel perfectly with a lovely appealing expression and it is positioned perfectly in the frame to suit the brief of the competition. Well exposed and a great capture. One comment though, would be that when entering shots for a cover, it's best if you don't add any additional text of your own. Copyright will always remain with the photographer and doesn't need adding to the shot. It can interfere with text that the magazine needs on the cover space. Well done Shell!! A beautiful image to be proud of.

Bob Turner - Tyne green rower

You won the last competition Bob, and you have come very close once again with this lovely image taken on the Tyne in Hexham. Sharp and well composed, it's a lovely shot. The only thing preventing a win this time is the lack of cover space at the top of the image, meaning key elements of the composition are covered over by the logo. For a magazine cover it's important to allow space at the top for logos etc. a bit more sky at the top and less foliage at the bottom would have been spot on. The glass like river gave some beautiful reflections and the lone rower gave a superb human element to the shot. Another superb shot Bob, that came close to getting you another win.

Honourable mentions!

There were a few other beautiful images that were in contention but were either presented in portrait format and therefore sadly didn't meet the brief for a cover shot, or just didn't quite make the top three. These images also caught my eye! Shaun Cosgrove, Simon Boyd, Dan Baker, Richard Hannam and Jackie Robson! Well done all of you, and thanks again to everyone who entered. Keep enjoying your photography!
